SYNOPSIS

The Years of Fierro (Los Años De Fierro)— César Fierro, the oldest Mexican prisoner on death row in the United States, has been languishing in a Texas prison for almost forty years. His sentence has been put off repeatedly as the contradictory details of his initial trial have been reviewed. The prosecuting attorney stated that he would not have proceeded with the trial had these details been revealed. César continues to await execution by lethal injection for a murder that evidence shows he did not commit. One of the most painful consequences of César's incarceration is the effect that the injustice and separation has had on his younger brother, Sergio, demonstrating how this miscarriage of justice resonates beyond one wrongfully imprisoned man. The Years of Fierro is a compassionate portrayal of César Fierro and the psychological hardship that he endures while awaiting his final day.

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

"Los Años de Fierro" started as a school project. It was my thesis film for the MFA in Film and Media Arts at Temple University. Over time, it became the most important project I've ever taken. I didn't want to tell César and Sergio's story only from the moral and ethical point of view. For me this was not a film about the death penalty, but about the effects of injustice on a family. While making the film, I tried to portray the human side of it; looking at the characters with respect, but without being condescending. The most difficult part of making this film was the limited amount of time that the prison gave us permission to see César – a very short period every 90 days. This policy is designed to make it difficult for the media to get to know the person beyond being a "prisoner" so that we don't think about the death penalty as a punishment for real people but as a punishment for criminals...

Over time César, Sergio and the lawyers have become my friends. I feel profound respect and admiration for all of them. I hope this film helps create awareness about the many ethical and legal problems surrounding the death penalty. I also hope that one day the authorities in Texas review César's case and finally accept that they made a mistake and that César deserves justice.

DIRECTOR BIOGRAPHY

Santiago Esteinou studied Film Direction in Mexico's Centro de Capacitación Cinematográfica. Later, he received a Fulbright Scholarship and, thanks to this, he completed a Master of Fine Arts in Film and Media Arts at Temple University. Returning to Mexico, he produced and directed "The Years of Fierro". This documentary was an Official Selection at the Toronto International Film Festival and was invited to more than 30 other festivals, receiving the Audience Award at the Santiago International Documentary Festival in Chile, the Best Documentary and Best Director Award at the Costa Rica International Film Festival and a nomination for the Mexican Academy Award (Ariel) for Best Feature Length Documentary. Currently, Santiago is pursuing a post-graduate degree in Human Rights and Democracy at the Latin-American Faculty of Social Sciences and is working on two new documentary films.
